Growing up it was taught to us that the red planet was a lifeless ball of rock out in space. We were always told that no other life existed in the solar system. A group-consciousness dictated to our lives that we need not question too much about Mars. We were constantly reassured at every form of questioning that there was indeed no such thing as life there or anywhere out there. In a strange way, it seems the group-consciousness of our planet had gotten dimmer over time, and less and less questioning of anything became more common. It seemed to have gotten to the point where questioning was totally out of the question and we were doomed to spend our lives without space neighbors.

The dream is beginning to take form like never before. Mars is clearly inhabited. Although this thought has not entered the group-thought or collective mind, if you will, it has entered the hearts and minds of individuals planet-wide. Is this the dream we have been waiting for? Yes, it is in fact the greatest discovery of our aeon. Now we may connect the dots with ancient history and find a similar heritage or lineage between our two planets. The idea of planetary isolationism is beginning to lose steam and obviously has no secure future. Who knows? Maybe there will always be idiot doubters who choose to close their minds to the ever-increasing photo evidence of people on Mars, but evolutionary law seems to favor the opposite outcome. Indeed we will discover that Earth is the alien and we have not been doing everything in line with the example of our partners in the universe.

Mars has life. Venus has life. The list goes on and on. The important part of it is the focus on Mars. If the time is coming for their presence to be revealed to us on a mass-consciousness level, then either we will become permanent universal friends and allies or there will be a planetary conflict. It's unlikely the latter will take place, but the climate of Earth is one of such low-vibration that an unspeakable atrocity of ignorance would not be surprising. Unfortunately the general populus across our planet is peaceful and desires zero conflict with any space people. In fact, the universal mindset is gaining power because the internet is unstoppable, no matter how hard the low-vibration countries are attempting to censor it. There is a living force behind the multitude of network lines, the nature of which is not fully understood and aetherial support is giving it strength.

Mars is the dream of dreams. We are becoming aware of their civilization. Even if the images are secondary in quality, it will not stop the scrutiny of imagination and the desire to make clear what is not clear. It's so special to our well-being on our planet to find out that we have neighbors on the red planet, who live their lives similarly yet also differently than we do here, that we can learn immensely from them in many ways, even if they are just people and not "gods." Maybe the time of the gods is not currently happening on Mars as much as it is not happening on Earth—we understand this. Pause for a second or three and imagine if we could have internet chat with Mars people. Think of logging into an internet that has more than one planet! Think if we could talk to them directly through the internet somehow. All it would take is a radio transmitter, but we may have to send them our form of computers or vice versa because it is likely that they do not have the same forms of technology (it might be quite odd when compared to ours!).

It is as if the previous world we lived in was a dream of a lower order and now we have wakened from sleep to a better dream, even if it is still just a dream. The hopes of humanity are locked up in dreams waiting to give back to the universe its ancient unknowable past and vastness of spirits, thoughts, life-forms and unbelievable truth and beauty from all ages and illuminance. With the old, pre-Mars world (of say 10-20 years ago maximum) we could only have faith in the fact of life elsewhere but now it is standing before us and waving at us! Instead of having to travel there, let's figure out a way to log-in to the Mars internet, get some kind of converter or have them send it so we can begin to make friendly, universal contact with our neighbors, greeting them with unassuming friendliness and goodwill. People may eventually take it for granted that somewhere along the line it became known that Mars and other planets are inhabited and will not remain skeptical or dazed about the discovery, as is the case now. Naturally with every new breakthrough there comes new problems and obstacles in the way. For every action there is an equal and opposite action. With the breakthrough that we no longer need cults or creeds that do not benefit all and that all wisdom is universal, then what unforeseeable mistakes and sidesteps may hinder our existence after this? More on this to come...

Some questions are as great as the answers to those questions:

Who were the builders of the Great Pyramids? When were they built? What were the happenings and events that surrounded these buildings and civilization? How do you perform telekinesis? What is the method? What about levitation, materialization and more? What is the truth of H.P. Blavatsky's life story? How did she materialize things? What is the ultimate crystal ball to acquire? What about other crystals? Where can they be found? Who were the foremost occultists of all ages, known and unknown?

How can the forest return? Where were the biggest, most magical forests in the previous age? What was the cause of the Oregon Vortex? Are there underground cities below the planet's surface? Who were the alchemists, occultists, magicians who never came out from the underground that we do not know the names of? What are the greatest uses of dowsing rods? What's the deal with John Dee? Where are the locations of vortexes on Earth? What are the most mystical places on Earth to visit? What were the Cathars really all about? Who wrote the Tarot? Where does it come from? How many planets are there? Did people really see another sun? What caused the Siberian Tunguska devastation?

What was the Alexandrian Library like? What is the basis of reincarnation—individually and culturally? Who were some well-known reincarnations? Who did a lot of black magic that we would not have thought? How far back can past life readings go? How do the people of Venus live there? Who is the entity on Neptune? What's really at the North Pole? An opening? What is the Aiud Artifact?

You must realize for every awesome finding, there are several that must be tossed out into the category of hoax, fraud, let-downs or artistic illusions. Well this is not one of those, in the opinion of the author. The object found in this famous moon photo, is a life form. The two holes are not eyes, they are where it gets its food or breath from. These things crawl around the moon and if you were there, you may see them here or there. There may be a lake or underground moisture zone where they can fester and grow before coming out to roam. Don't suppose that life has to follow the rules we have on earth. The author supposes they are three to four feet in height. It has skin and is not see-through. This life form is bad news. It may have been attempting to approach the photographer in this scene. They live in groups. They will kill you. It might have fangs, claws or suckers (something we have not seen on earth). This thing is a lunar life form that will kill you instantly if it gets you! And you thought video games were fun! Nasa is much more fun than Nintendo! Thank you Nasa.

Today is Leo Tolstoy's Birthday. Happy Birthday, sir. A person of passion, vision and strength.

Tolstoy was a very strong personality. He had a rough life. He hoped for change. He was courageous. And his writings stay with us.

There are two videos of Bigfoot that the author believes to be genuine. More footage may exist but only two have been seen that he psychically verified. Here are screen shots from these two videos.

The Patterson Film is Real

Thankfully the author teaches at nxxs.org a way to accurately get clairvoyant readings with kabalistic Tarot, so the common methods of fact-finding are completely done away with because it is not necessary at all. An amazing piece of footage, as great as the Patterson film only except it is from much more recent times with updated equipment for shooting the footage. Isn't it wonderful? The psychic imprint is upon this footage for genuineness. Many may ask, if you are so psychic, then what exactly is 'Bigfoot' or rather, what is a Bigfoot? They are not human or animal. Yet they might be related to bears. Sasquatch (or Bigfoot) has understanding and psychic intuition. People can't find them because they are always one step ahead. But be not confused, in the same way that it is said “we come from the Creator,” Sasquatch is also a part of the kingdom of life on our planet. They are probably evolving alongside the human race through the millions of years. Don't forget that Sasquatches could tear you to pieces. But it seems they may like humans also. So he falls somewhere in between humans and animals, but neither, he is his own type of creature. They can jump with one foot explaining missing prints. They are probably adept climbers and are obviously able to go to places in the wilderness inaccessible to humans. Respect them and do not try to hurt them. That is why the female is running off in the Patterson film, probably for fear of her life. They realize they may be a prize for a cruel hunter hoping to get his ego exalted by contemporary science. Be kind to these creatures and they may let you see them once or twice.
